

Dimitri G. Demekas

Economist and financial sector expert, with an extensive record of research and publications on economics, finance, global governance, and financial regulation. He has decades of experience interacting with senior policymakers on economic strategy and policy, bridging gaps between technocrats and politicians, academics and policymakers, economists and financial regulators. He has been a senior manager in large, multinational organizations and has worked in major global institutions, such as the G20, IMF, World Bank, the FSB, and the EU. He has hands-on expertise in economic policy development, institution-building, and working with governments and donors in emerging market and developing countries.
